Outcomes

Objectives

- To contribute to the training of the students on the promotion of the production and consumption of local varieties and to communicate the work done in DIVERSIFOOD project.
- To promote university community gardens as spaces for the collective management of cultivated biodiversity.

Positive and negative points

Strengths

- To gather with different representatives of different community gardens of public universities of Andalucía.

Weaknesses

- Students have not deep knowledge in seed production and local varieties.

Relevance

The activity helped to show the relevance of the role that university community gardens could play in the conservation and use of cultivated biodiversity.

Tricks for other partners

University community gardens are a very interesting field to work with from a raising awareness and training perspective.

Perspectives

To continue the collaboration between RAS and university community gardens.
